

David T. Nastal, class of 1972, earned a Bachelor of Music Degree from Westminster College and a Master Degree in Liturgical Music from The Catholic University of America. Mr. Nastal continued his education as he studied Business at the University of Dallas Texas, John Carroll University in Ohio and the Christopher Newport University. Most recently, Mr. Nastal studied Philosophy at The Catholic University of America in Washington, D.C.

Mr. Nastal currently serves as the Director of Performing Arts at the Georgetown Visitation Preparatory School in Washington, D.C. During his time at Georgetown, Mr. Nastal's choirs and theater program have received numerous awards, international accolades and recognition from colleagues and professional organizations.

Previously, Mr. Nastal was the Director of Music at St. Joseph's Church on Capitol Hill and has been sought after as a regional and international choir festival guest conductor. His proficiency as a musician and liturgist has enable him to be employed as a university professor at the University of Dallas, Texas and Borromeo College in Ohio.

Mr. Nastal is a contributing author for Catholic Church music publications as well as authoring a pedagogical book on the training of children's voices.